East Side

The East Side consists of the largest collection of affluent neighborhoods in Greater Cincinnati, including Anderson, Mariemont, Hyde Park, Mount Lookout, Madeira, and Indian Hill.

Much of the East Side's affluence is the result of the population explosion of young, dual-income families looking for nice places to live.

Much of the business activity on the East Side is retail, with many small, quaint, upscale shopping districts such as Hyde Park Square and Mount Lookout Square, in addition to the large popular malls, Kenwood Towne Center and the Eastgate Mall.

Interstate 71 and Route 50 are two of the major routes for the East Side and become crowded during rush hours.

Location of the Mariemont Strand

Mariemont Village History

In 1910, Mary Emery informed her closest business associates of her desire to construct a self-contained community built in accordance with the basic principles of town planning. In this year, nearly 100,000 of the city's 400,000 residents lived in overcrowded conditions and the lack of housing in Cincinnati prompted Mrs. Emery to move ahead with the construction of the new town.

The site for the new town was selected because of its location to downtown Cincinnati, being just 10 miles away, and its location to the industrial areas of Oakley and Norwood.

It was Mrs. Emery's intention that Mariemont be completely self-contained. It was her intention that Mariemont would have its own shopping center, bank, restaurant, and grocery store. In addition, Mrs. Emery was determined that "people of moderate means" be given the chance of a better place in which to live: a place of open spaces and fresh air, away from the crowded tenements, smoke, and grime of the inner city. Housing, shopping, schools, recreation, and work would be within close proximity to one another. The idea was not to build the houses close together, but to create an attractive architecture and landscaping to make the place one of the real beauty.

The town plan also provided the following:

- Creation of a town center as the main focal point.
- Creation of a low density, single-family residential area adjacent to the town center.
- Implementation of medium density multi-family housing in the Norwest section of the town with its own small commercial area.
- Creation of a large interconnected green space.
- Underground utilities and central steam heating.
- Restrictive covenants that would limit the scale of single family houses to two stories and set guidelines where the house could be built on the lot.
